

Pain and Addiction Management in the ED: Are ED Clinicians Jacks of All Trades?

Course Director: Sergey Motov, MD, FAAEM

A few words about the Course Director: Dr. Sergey Motov is an Emergency Medicine Physician and Research Director at Maimonides Medical Center. He graduated from the Medical Academy of Latvia and completed his Emergency Medicine residency at Maimonides. He is passionate about safe and effective pain management in the Emergency Department. He has numerous publications on the subject of opioid alternatives in pain management, and in his role as Research Director, he is actively involved in growing this body of work both nationally and globally.

When: Thursday, May 23rd 03:00 PM to 8:00 PM

Where: Athens War Museum, Library

Course Language: English

Description

The pre-conference workshop on Pain and Addiction Management in the Emergency Department aims to address the pressing need for effective strategies for managing pain while considering the risks of addiction. This educational session will explore current trends in emergency pain management, with a focus on the efficient and judicious use of analgesics of different classes to balance efficacy with safety. Participants will gain insights into the latest pharmacological advancements and non-pharmacological approaches to pain relief. A significant emphasis will be placed on understanding the unique challenges posed by different therapeutic agents and age groups, from pediatric to geriatric patients, in the context of pain and addiction management. The workshop will provide practical guidance on tailoring pain management strategies to the specific painful syndromes and vulnerabilities of diverse populations of patients. Through a combination of lectures, case studies, and interactive discussions, attendees will enhance their knowledge and skills in providing optimal analgesia, mitigating the risk of addiction, and addressing the complexities of pain management in the emergency department setting.

Who should attend?

- Anyone who treats Emergency Medicine patients
- Anyone who treats patients in pain

Faculty

Sergey Motov, MD, FAAEM

Duration: 5 hours

Course fee: 30€

Number of trainees that will be accepted: 50

Space is very limited, so secure your spot in this transformative course by registering early. Visit the congress website for registration details.

Deadline for registration: May 20th 2024

The course will offer a coffee break

For further information click here or use the following QR code

